

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A debug device has a serialization section for converting a parallel program to a serial program and creating debug data indicating the corresponding relation between the parallel program and the serial program. The debug device further has a storage section for storing the debug data and a conversion section for mutually converting the corresponding data between the parallel program and the serial program based on the debug data in order for an operator to efficiently perform a debug operation.